

F.A.R.T

Renaissance art is my absolute FAVE! Who can resist a wee fella like this?

Notes from Paris, Dijon & Beaune

I was a very lucky bunny this April and I got to go on holiday. Hopped on the train to Paris and then onwards to Dijon, because MUSTAAAAARDDD? The F in F.A.R.T for this edition also stands for FOOOOOOD... If you are Vegan or Diabetic my sincere apologies...

French Trip Tip:

DO eat at every patisserie and boulangerie you have room for, especially if someone claims that it was the best croissant they'd ever eaten. I dream of a certain Croissant Suisse nightly. (Thank you Du Pain Pour Demain). And if you don't come back from France half-human/half-quiche what have you been doing?

Recommendations:

- The best art is always FREEEEEE: Dijon Beaux Arts and RUDE Museum.
- Why wouldn't you follow the owl trail to find the owl of Dijon's Notre Dame?
- If you would like an éclair to remember then go to: Pâtisserie Thomas Bouvart in Beaune.
- Eat around the world in Paris: Mandarin Bao at Petit Bao, Argentinian Medialunas at Pilo's & Lebanese Meze at Mèzèterie.
- See some wild sculptures and tombstones, whilst also getting a great view of Paris from: Cimetière du Père-Lachaise.
- Thrift the day away thanks to: Chez Henry Dijon and Thrifty Grave.

I would say that my style icon for packing this trip was the Mad Hatter. To be honest, I think we can learn a lot from this cutiepatootie, he likes a tea party, rocks a jaunty hat, partial to a sing-a-long and wraps his neck up like he's the gift! Even though I didn't have the jaunty hat-game down, I think the rest was pretty spot on. PLUS I bought a beaut of a red wool cardigan and a Mickey mouse tie.

Always be on the look out for those Renaissance finger toes
